

Open access policy of National Institute for Fusion Science

February 1, 2022

The National Institute for Fusion Science (hereinafter referred to as “NIFS”) understands that a large part of its research activities is supported by public resources and has decided that its research data and output published in scholarly articles should be open to the public. Consequently, NIFS is adopting an open access policy as below.

1. NIFS provides open public access to the research articles of its staff members (authored or co-authored) published in academic journals by publishers, academic societies or research institutes, via the NIFS Repository.
2. In cases where the copyright is owned by the publisher, this open access policy is applied without contradicting the terms of the contract between authors and publisher.
3. When NIFS staff members request a waiver of this policy for reasons of copyright or others, NIFS will examine the conditions and make an appropriate decision.
4. Procedures allowing research data to be open access are described in other documents.